Gaston Larche, upon being convicted of arson in a New Orleans court, dramatically swallowed the contents of a vial, and fell to the floor writhing and groaning. He was put on a sofa amid the intense excitement of the spectators, and a physician was hurriedly sent for. The physician who came did not use the stcmach pump which he brought along, but held ammonia under Larche's nose. The fellow tried hard to maintain a semblannce of insensibility, but finally gave it up, and confessed that he had been shamming. He had hoped to be sent to the hospital, from which he might escape.
